Saturday, May 19, 2001
9:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Town and Country Resort
Mountain Road, (Vermont Route 108)
Stowe, Vermont.

You probably already have received a postcard mailing with details of this meeting. There will be a brief business meeting, two speakers in the morning session, a comfortably long lunch break, and one speaker in the afternoon. Among the speakers will be Elise Guyette, whose topic will be "Merging Census Data and Literature: Reconstructing the Lives of African Americans in Early Vermont." Ms. Guyette, who has extensive background in educational and scholarly research efforts with a particular interest in minorities in Vermont, will share insights about finding the history of Vermonters which should interest researchers with all kinds of Vermont background.

The telephone number of the Town and Country resort is 802-253-7595. You may wish to consider an overnight stay there if you are coming from a distance.

Seacrest, Falmouth, Massachusetts

You may not have bought your 2003 calendar yet, but these are the dates for the next NERGC event.

GSV membership meeting
Saturday, October 20, 2001
9:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Place to be announced

Vermont Historical Society plans
We hope, at our Spring meeting, to have pictures of the renovated Spaulding School building in Barre, which will soon house the VHS library. Moving to the new facility will necessitate closing the library between November 1, 2001 and June 1, 2002, a fact which out-of-state researchers considering a Vermont research expedition may need to keep in mind. See Mr. Carnahan's article in this issue.

Our Web Site
We need your ideas about ways to make our Web site: www.rootsweb.com/~vtsvsv more useful to members and to the public at large. Every so often, we hear from a member, "I want the Web site to have genealogies of everyone in Vermont on it. When are you guys going to do that for us?" We'd love to, but we haven't had many volunteers come forward to help out with anything so ambitious. We may incorporate features which would be accessible only to GSV members, in order to make membership more useful to those who join and pay their dues. Let our Web Master Diantha Howard at dhoward@zoo.uvm.edu know your thoughts. We'll be making this a priority.

Remembering Tom Bassett
No one who has done any amount of work with Vermont history can fail to recognize the name of Thomas Day Seymour Bassett. (He usually was "T.D. Seymour Bassett" in his published work and "Tom" to his many friends). In addition to a multitude of journal articles on subjects of Vermont interest, he published books including Outsiders Inside Vermont (an anthology of travelers' and visitors' descriptions of the state); The Growing Edge: Vermont Villages 1840-1880 (a condensed version of his doctoral dissertation about urbanization and industrialization in Vermont in the nineteenth century); and most recently The Gods of the Hills: Piety and Society in Nineteenth-Century Vermont, a fine resource for an understanding of what those ancestors' religious beliefs were really all about. The work which will probably do most to immortalize him to researchers, however, is Vermont: A Bibliography of its History, published by the Committee for a New England Bibliography in 1981, listing thousands of books, pamphlets, and articles about facets of Vermont history. It is probably an exaggeration to claim that Tom could have compiled this book from memory, but certainly no one else could or would have known the field so thoroughly. As he scoured my Vermontiana collection for bits and pieces to put in the Bibliography, I pointed out an article in a magazine which, to state the situation gently, was hardly a standard historical reference. Somewhat against my protests - I knew that the article was riddled with errors of fact - he insisted that its coverage met standards for inclusion in the Bibliography, and it appears there with all six thousand-odd other entries. He could be by turns charming, beneficent, cranky, miserly, pious, and irreverent, all inside of a sentence or two.

His death on January 24, 2001 deprived Vermont of one of its very special characters.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY TO BE CLOSED THIS WINTER
If you have research to do at the Vermont Historical Society library in Montpelier, you should plan to do it this summer before the library closes for it to move to Barre. The VHS library will be closing November 1, 2001; it will reopen on June 1, 2002, in the new Vermont History Center in the old Spaulding Graded School on Washington Street in downtown Barre.

Although the VHS library is always a busy place, the closing has been scheduled to coincide with "slow" times in the library, thus minimizing the inconvenience to library patrons. A lot of work will be happening behind closed doors during this "down time." Staff members will be working with stacks of materials that have been set aside and never fully processed. Some of these materials are in twenty boxes in the basement, leftover from the last time the collections were moved in 1990. Some were received a long time ago; others were received more recently. All of them need to find a proper home in the publicly accessible collections before the new library opens in Barre.

The library staff and volunteers will also inventory the book collection, a task that has not been done in almost 25 years. While the teams of workers check to see that all of our books are on the shelves where they are supposed to be, they will also attach bar codes to each book in preparation for the day when we can convert our card catalog to a computerized catalog.

The library workers will also work to integrate oversized books marked with an "X" into the regular book collection. The elimination of the "X" collection, previously an impossible task in the cramped library in the Pavilion, will be one of the many benefits of the new library in the Vermont History Center.

When the new library opens it will occupy 7500 square feet on the second floor of the Vermont History Center, an increase of almost three times over the size of the current library. The stacks will remain open as in the old building, but staff work areas will be separated from public spaces. Special air conditioning and humidification systems will work to preserve the collections. There will be separate rooms for microfilm readers, computerized databases, and maps and photographs. The Vermont History Center will also include classrooms, an auditorium, display galleries, and storage for library and museum collections.

Although the opening date for the Vermont History Center has been set for June 1, 2002, the date may change depending on how work progresses. Researchers should check the VHS's web site at http://www.state.vt.us/vhs to check on changes in the schedule.

VERMONT CITY DIRECTORIES WANTED
The Vermont Historical Society has just posted on the web its publication Vermont City Directories in Vermont Repositories, a listing by town and year of city directories owned by eight large libraries including the VHS, Vermont Department of Libraries, and UVM Special Collections.

The listing can be consulted at http://www.state.vt.us/vhs/CityDir. It can be used to determine which libraries have which city directories in their collections. An added feature of the directory is cross-references for small towns that were occasionally listed in volumes with larger, neighboring towns. VHS volunteer and GSV member Robert Murphy compiled the directory in 1999.

The VHS is interested in expanding its collection of city directories. If anyone has extra copies that are not owned by the VHS (consult the list first!) we would love to have them.

Paul Carnahan
VHS Librarian

DIRECTORIES WANTED
The Historical Genealogy Department of the Allen County Public Library, 900 Webster St., PO. Box 2270, Fort Wayne, IN 46801-2270 is looking to expand its special collection of Directories.

This special project is focused on collecting directories from all across the United States. Going beyond city directories, they are also interested in directories from churches, clubs, schools, any type of organizational or association (large or small), lists of municipal employees, yearbooks, class reunion lists, teacher lists... in short, directories of all kinds.

If you have any of the above materials in search of a good home, think of the Allen County Library, don't let the materials end up in a dumpster.

Questions should be addressed to Susan D. Kaufman, Librarian, at the address above, phone 219-421-1225 or by e-mail at skaufman@acpl.lib.in.us. See also: http://www.acpl.lib.in.us

Books that go into the collection have a permanent home, none are discarded. The collection goal is to have as many sources from as many geographic locations as possible. Lets have GSV Members well represented.
